Describe how slums develop in LICs/NEEs.

"Slums mostly develop in....."

"Large numbers of people are attracted to the cities because....."

"This rapid migration of people causes slums to grow because....."

This can cause problems such as....."

Key words / Terms:

- Rural urban migration
- Employment
- Marginal land
- Resources
- Facilities

Slums mostly develop in low income countries as they do not have enough money to provide houses. Large numbers of people are drawn to cities due to job opportunities as they cannot get any elsewhere. The rapid migration of people causes slums to grow because people want to build their home as quickly as possible meaning houses are built before proper piping can be put in the ground and electricity can be sourced. People are also trying to build houses quickly so they get scrap material. This can cause problems such as flying toilets being their only option which can cause diseases to spread. Children may become orphans due to nobody being able to look after them in the slums.

What research methods I plan to use.

For my research project I will be using both primary and secondary research to carry out the needed information for the task. The primary research will be a questionnaire to ask a hair stylist on how to create a 1960s hairstyle, this will obtain data from a professional point of view. I will also be asking family and friends who were teenagers in the 1960s questions about the hair and beauty trends they followed, the icons they followed and so on ... This allows a personal impact on my research. Qualitative research will link into this research method by using questionnaire. For my secondary research I will be using the internet to research facts on the hair and beauty industry in 1960, this will also include the equipment and products they used. This, again, will also include how the trend from then to now have changed. I may also research through some books and magazines for further information if I can get my hands on some.

Guccio Gucci is the founder of iconic fashion brand Gucci. He started working as a porter in the Savoy Hotel, London, when he became fascinated with the bags guests would bring with them. When returning home to Florence Italy in 1921, he set up a leather goods store. In the beginning, it was mainly presented towards leather gear for horse riders but as his designs grew in popularity, he indulged in accessories.

Many celebrities were massive fans of the luxury bags, such as Elizabeth Taylor

Tom Ford was originally creative director at Gucci, his time there was very memorable and he created a lot of iconic Gucci looks. Currently, the creative director is Alessandro Michele. Many argue he is the reason Gucci is relevant again.

Gucci was the first luxury brand to utilize ECONYL's® recycled and regenerated nylon fiber derived from fishnets, carpets and textile waste in its ready-to-wear pieces.

Magazine article researching a fashion brand.

One way Gucci has managed to stay popular over the years is through its collaborations. One of the most notable of these is Harry Styles. He is an ambassador for the brand, always in their clothes or even starring in adverts for them. In 2019, following the release of his 2nd album Fine Line, Harry put out a limited edition t-shirt with the brand. It was massively successful and gained Gucci a lot of press.

Collaborating with popular celebrities will gain Gucci massive popularity and keep them relevant, as multiple people will report on them. Harry Styles is only one example.

My opinion

I think Gucci is a one of a kind brand, Alessandro has totally reinvented the meaning of the brand and I am all here for it. Gucci has no gender norms, such as Harry Styles wearing the iconic blue dress (although he isn't the first to do this). I support this brand so much and I really love the whole 'weird' vibe they have going on. The 70s vibe is also so fitting. It's only becoming more popular, and I couldn't be more happier.
